

THE GARRETT TIMES

It's been a busy year for the Garretts...

We hope this finds you all healthy & happy. And just like all other years, we wonder where 2010 went.

Our year began with Brian "finally" getting his Sport Pilot license and our purchase of a share of "The Sting!" We were lucky enough to take several day trips - for a "$100 burger" in Raton, NM, La Veta Valley to have hot cocoa with our neighbors, and Steamboat Springs to try out mountain flying. Plus a couple of overnight trips - to the humidity of Omaha to visit Laurie's nephew, and to Los Alamos, NM for a fly-in with other Colorado pilots.

Las Vegas and Cocoa Beach/Orlando were also on the travel itineraries for 2010, but we chose to leave "The Sting" at home for those trips.

The photo to the left is that of the iconic NASA countdown clock at Kennedy Space Center, FL. We went to see the launch of the space shuttle, however it has yet to blast-off. It is currently scheduled for February 2011, so checkout next year's edition of "The Garrett Times" for an update as we try again to witness this event.

We count you among our blessings! May you have a very Merry Christmas & Happy New Year!
